

GLORIA Great Basin Peak Opportunity Fellowships 2026

GLORIA Great Basin (www.gloriagreatbasin.org) surveys have long been an amazing opportunity for students and recent graduates to gain invaluable field experience in botany and field ecology while making connections with their peers and professionals in nonprofits, academia, and in state and federal agencies. GLORIA Great Basin also recognizes that there are students who face barriers which exclude them from research opportunities, especially for opportunities in remote mountains that pose the unique challenges of transportation, field gear, and time.

Through our Peak Opportunity Fellowships, GLORIA Great Basin will fully support up to three students (upper-division undergraduate, post-baccalaureate or graduate students) to join us in our surveys in the White Mountains this summer. We will provide successful applicants with transportation, field gear, room and board, an $850 stipend (for 7 days) and mentorship (e.g., facilitating networking, providing guidance on job applications, etc.). Fieldwork will be in the White Mountains on July 20th – 27th, 2026. Applicants must be available for the entire survey dates. We cannot accept applications from students residing outside the United States. Applicants need to be able to carry ~25lbs and hike over rough terrain for about 1 hour at elevations over 10,000ft.

- Fellowships will be awarded on a competitive basis, and we encourage students who self-identify along one or more of the following axes of diversity to apply:
 - First-generation college student (neither parent/guardian having completed a baccalaureate degree) or from an economically disadvantaged background;
 - Member of an ethnic or racial group that has been historically excluded from graduate education and STEM, including but not limited to Black, Indigenous (American Indian/Alaskan Native, Native Hawaiian, other Native Pacific Islander) and/or Latinx;
 - Other groups that have been historically excluded from graduate education and STEM, including but not limited to those who manage a disability, identify as LGBTQ+, military veterans, holders of DACA, TPS, refugee, or asylee status, and single parents.

The awardee will be selected by GLORIA Great Basin Board with the following selection criteria:

- Interest of the student in global change and conservation in mountains
- Overall experiential strength of the application

To apply, please submit a 1) a CV including 1-2 references, and 2) a 1-page statement that describes your current research interests, self-identification of axes of diversity, and how this fellowship will contribute to your future goals as a single pdf via this google form: <https://forms.gle/jKdvrzX6t4MkaqFe7>. Please email coordinator@gloriagreatbasin.org if you need assistance. The application deadline is April 30, 2026.
